Career in Cosmetology

A cosmetologist is someone trained in applying cosmetic procedures, therapies, and treatments to beautify one's outer appearance, and in implementing cosmetic treatments to people's hair, skin, and nails. Also referred to as beauty therapists, cosmetologists have a diverse range of career choices, from having their own salon, teaching, to also working in different industries such as in film, makeup artist, freelance, hair removal, editorial, TV, beauty blogger/vlogger.

The Good Careers Guide lists a range of tasks or duties that a beauty therapist can fulfil, including –

- Carrying out skin analysis and give advice about skin and body care
- Perform facial or body massage and aromatherapy treatment
- Analyse body type and advise on exercise programs and nutrition
- Use a variety of treatments and electrical equipment to treat skin and body conditions
- Remove facial and body hair by electrolysis or waxing
- Provide advice and support to clients following cosmetic surgery
- Recognise problems and refer clients to medical practitioners such as dermatologists, plastic surgeons, endocrinologists, podiatrists, chiropractors, and physiotherapists

To become a beauty therapist, students usually have to complete a VET qualification in beauty therapy, and beauty therapists with nationally accredited qualifications may work throughout Australia.

These apprenticeships are aimed at recruiting more women to take the first steps in a fulfilling and rewarding career in the solar and renewable energy sector.

Solar Victoria is funding grants for apprenticeships for women, to address both skilled worker shortages and the underrepresentation of women in trades.

Women are significantly under-represented in the solar industry, making up less than one per cent of electricians, plumbers, solar PV and battery designers and installers, and licensed electrical inspectors.

Many students consider a career in the legal industry yet only know of a lawyer or judge. Many have heard of, but do not know, what a criminologist does.

According to the Good Careers Guide, criminologists examine the systems by which people accused of crimes are brought to justice, attempt to explain the reasons for criminal behaviour and suggest ways crime might be reduced.

Criminologists may perform the following tasks:

- study the ways certain criminal justice agencies operate including the law courts, police services, prisons, and community-based correction centres
- provide information about crime and the ways in which people are processed by the criminal justice system
- compile crime statistics and develop ways in which crime solving resources can be best used

Criminologists may specialise in organisational research, victimology, corporate crime, adult corrections and/or juvenile justice. They may work in the legal field, which tries to make sure that laws keep up with changes in society. They may also work in the social/psychological fields, which study the effects of the criminal justice system or the factors which contribute to offending behaviour by individuals.

So, what type of person becomes a criminologist?

- Someone who has analytical ability
- Someone with personal integrity
- Someone interested in welfare and human behaviour
- Someone interested in working with disadvantaged groups
